HBCUs

INNOVATORS FOR FUTURE SUCCESS

This year's conference will frame issues that include, but are not limited to: building capacity in response to new challenges; responding to issues of accreditation; building sustainable partnerships; strengthening community ties; framing new pathways to science, technology, engineering and mathematics; building networks for on-line courses; improving access and opportunity; responding to the needs of non-traditional students; and responding to issues of diversity and inclusion, etc.

WHITE HOUSE INITIATIVE ON HISTORICALLY BLACK COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES

NOTES FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

SEPTEMBER 2014

HISTORICALLY BLACK COLLEGES & UNIVERSITIES

HBCUs

INNOVATORS FOR FUTURE SUCCESS

On behalf of the Office of the White House Initiative on Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs) and the President's Board of Advisors on HBCUs, I am pleased to welcome you to the 2014 National Historically Black Colleges and Universities Week Conference. We hope that you will accumulate much knowledge and gain many resources so that together we can celebrate securing the tools necessary for us to continue making our theme a reality—"HBCUs: Innovators for Future Success."

For our theme reflects the engine that black colleges were built upon—innovative and transformative educational approaches to ensure that access to the American dream is attainable for all. Because of the hard work and strong foundations laid by our predecessors, HBCUs have become such an integral part of our cherished American culture that it is incumbent upon us to continue enhancing the legacy of ensuring that HBCUs guarantee future success for our nation's greater good.

As you peruse our program and participate in our conference you will notice the diverse array of public and private partners and sponsors that have joined in our shared quest to realize the goals of our theme. Their participation portrays the broad appeal and indispensability of HBCUs, while demonstrating the vital reciprocal relationship between black colleges and the public and private sectors. We are thankful to have partners who are willing to invest much-needed resources into HBCUs so that together we can reach President Barack Obama's "North Star" goal of America once again having the highest proportion of college graduates in the world by 2020.

HBCUs were critical to our country's initial ability to attain this prestigious ranking among college graduates worldwide—and, as our president has insisted—to reach this goal again HBCUs cannot merely survive, but must also thrive over the next decade and beyond. The president makes evident that not just African-American but also American and global success rests on what HBCUs innovate!

Because of stand-out undergraduate and graduate students at black colleges, such as this year's inaugural cohort of 2014 HBCU All-Stars, I am confident that conquering the challenges that HBCUs currently face is worth the reward of creating a vibrant professional class of black college graduates who understand the importance of reinvestment in their schools and country.

I am hopeful that this year's conference will serve as a springboard for strengthening all of our institutions and accomplishing all of our stakeholders' progressive goals. I encourage you to take full advantage of all strategic resources and opportunities laid out for you this year. It is my sincere hope that over the next two days you will stay fully engaged and ask questions as we remain vigilant in our collective journeys to elevate one of the world's greatest national treasures—HBCUs.

Let us not end the conversation about future innovation at black colleges here. Rather, let us carry the conversation back to our respective institutions and offices to generate tangible, functional, and pioneering action!

Thanks for your attendance, participation, and unwavering commitment to HBCUs.

With great enthusiasm,

"HBCUS ARE MY BROTHER'S KEEPER" – LUNCHEON

Salon 2 & 3

HBCUs have the potential to play a major role in expanding college access to school-age Black males. However, HBCUs need coordinated and proactive strategies to disrupt a system that underprepares Black males for postsecondary education and restricts their higher education options to the least competitive institutions of higher education. In February 2014, President Obama launched My Brother's Keeper – a new initiative to help every boy and young man of color break barriers and get ahead. The initiative surveys and builds on the work of communities and institutions that are adopting approaches to promote success among males of color. This session draws from the experiences of successful Black male initiatives at HBCUs to explore how HBCUs can contribute to the national agenda to help Black males to reach their full potential, contribute to their communities and build successful lives for themselves and their families.

WELCOME REMARKS	Jim Shelton	Deputy Secretary, U.S. Department of Education

ENHANCING HBCU PARTNERSHIPS IN RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

Virginia Suite B & C
Research & Institutional
Advancement Track

It is imperative that HBCUs continue to have a growing presence across the public and private sectors. Improving relationships in research and institutional advancement will provide successful modes of engagement with federal and private agencies. This will also measure successful outcomes because expanding partnerships across an array of fields will keep HBCUs on the forefront of conducting cutting-edge research and supporting leading academic programs. This panel will explore the most effective methods for improving HBCU partnerships in research and development with the public and private sectors.

HBCUS' ROLE IN BUILDING A WORKFORCE THAT AMERICA NEEDS

Virginia Suite A
Academic Affairs & Faculty
Development Track

HBCUs have a graduating body that adds much-needed diversity to the job market. Black colleges also offer distinct programs and unique cultural experiences that help America's workplace adapt to the broadening global trends of the world. This session will provide an opportunity for university officials, federal agencies, corporations, and associations to discuss the benefits of the reciprocating relationship between the job market and HBCUs. The panelists will also examine the role of black colleges in propelling minorities into the future workforce.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION PRIORITIES: ENGAGING THE HBCU COMMUNITY

Salon 2 & 3

A variety of federal regulations, emerging policies, and grant programs directly influence HBCUs and the students they serve. This session provides a special occasion for HBCU leaders to be updated on regulatory developments, department initiatives, and grant competitions. Federal student loan programs, the reauthorization of the Higher Education Act, the College Score Card, and Title III programs are just a few of the initiatives that have consequences for HBCUs. With the intent to engage participants, Department of Education leaders will be prepared to take up the issue of how the Department can continually support the mission and vitality of HBCUs.

HBCUs' PIVOTAL ROLE IN SUPPLIER DIVERSITY: BILLION DOLLAR ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSION

Maryland Suite B & C

Both public and private organizations are aware of the pivotal role that HBCUs and African Americans play in supplier diversity or growing minority-owned businesses. In light of these realities, the Billion Dollar Roundtable (BDR) was created to recognize and partner with corporations that commit to spend at least $1 billion with minority-owned suppliers. HBCU graduates have high potential of becoming minority business owners. BDR will host this panel to bring awareness to the black college community about its ability to work with corporations and access resources available for African Americans to increase their business-owning possibilities. This session will also offer practical guidance in operating successful supplier diversity programs.

MODERATOR	Sharon Patterson	President and Chief Executive Officer, Billion Dollar Roundtable

ADVANCING EDUCATIONAL OUTCOMES IN SCIENCE, TECHNOLOGY, ENGINEERING, AND MATHEMATICS AT HISTORICALLY BLACK COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES

Virginia Suite A & B

Ensuring that HBCU students in STEM disciplines succeed in college and the workforce is an important priority. Toward that end, the Charles H. Houston Center for the Study of the Black Experience in Education at Clemson University has partnered with HBCUs to investigate STEM issues via three National Science Foundation grant-funded projects: Advancing Interest and Motivation (AIM) for STEM Careers; Mixed Methods Study of the Factors Influencing Recruitment, Retention, and Academic Achievement of Undergraduate Females and Males in STEM Disciplines at HBCUs; and Examining the Impact of Online Distance Education on Student Learning and Student Engagement in STEM Disciplines at Historically Black Colleges and Universities. Collectively, the projects were designed to examine HBCU STEM students' achievement and career attainment outcomes, highlight issues in STEM education impacting HBCUs, discuss emerging trends in STEM education, and describe recommendations for practice.

WHITE HOUSE INITIATIVE ON HBCUS 2014 HBCU ALL-STARS

The White House Initiative on Historically Black Colleges and Universities (WHIHBCU) announced its first class of HBCU All-Stars, recognizing 75 undergraduate, graduate, and professional students for their accomplishments in academics, leadership, and civic engagement. Currently enrolled at 62 HBCUs, the All-Stars were selected to serve as ambassadors of the WHIHBCU by providing outreach and communication with their fellow students about the value of education and the initiative as a networking resource. Over the course of the next year — through social media and their relationships with community-based organizations — the All-Stars will share promising and proven practices that support opportunities for all young people to achieve their educational and career potential.
